must have happened.

Q Said what was Friday? A. Why, the 14th was Friday.

Q This was Simpson? A. A fellow by the name of McGonigal here. He is a brother-in-law of Francis Schonck Brown.

However, he misled me, but I made a mistake. That is where I weakened my alibi. So this is what I know to be a fact. On September 14, Thursday, 1922, I fished at the foot of Brown Avenue with Mr. Stevens, Henry Stevens.

Q Brown Avenue? A. This is Brown Avenue.

Q That is the street right in front of your house which goes on by Mr. Stevens's house? A. That is Brown Avenue to the beach.

Q Leading right on to the beach? A. To the beach, yes. And he was fishing right near me. I will tell this to you, not for publication and not to use now.

Q Sure. A. I had a banker friend of mine, a broker who was prominently known in Philadelphia, named Stoneback. He did not want his name used until I said to him last week, I said, "Stoneback, if it comes to the showdown," I said, "We will do everything we can for Mr. Stevens. You will be willing to swear to a statement." "Yes," he said, "when it comes to that." But I never used his name. When Simpson asked down here and wanted me to give the affidavits of my friends, four of them that were here, two couple, two
